

About Us

Imaginal Airlines is a growing collective of multidisciplinary artists, musicians, designers, meditators, united by a commitment to blend aesthetic practise with scientific and metaphysical inquiry,

Imaginal Airlines is a metaphysical, theatrical investigation of consciousness, qualia, and its inherent subjectivity. It is rooted in the experiential traditions of theatre and sound, as well as embodied, meditative, and somatic practices. This multidisciplinary meta-exploration transforms physical spaces into an airport-airplane setting, acting as a creative response to contemporary existential challenges.

Imaginal Airlines draws from performance art and ritual theatre blending them with practices from meditation and mysticism. It uses this unique blend to engage with themes from transpersonal psychology (Grof, 2000), exploring the deep, personal nature of consciousness and the subjective quality of our experience, or qualia (Nagel, 1974).

Using the journey as a metaphor to create a liminal space—a powerful "in-between" state where transformation is possible (Turner, 1969). As a personal journey shared in a communal way, the experience is designed to be both light and playful while also holding space for profound self-engagement. It meets participants wherever they are, offering a unique group experience.

The focus of Imaginal Airlines lies not in crossing physical borders, but in providing a frame to explore internal borders, the lens of perception, states of consciousness, and the qualitative nature of our experience. Its immersive structure and toolkit act as a communal vessel for imaginal exploration. The "theatre-like quality" of the experience, where it is "neither real nor not real," immerses participants, fostering deeper self-connection and a "cosmopoesis", a process where internal images can "spill over" into shaping their perception of the world (Stengers, 2010).

The Poetics of Perception

Our mission is to create a deep listening space and a framework that fosters curiosity about the nature of consciousness, inviting participants to explore their inner world. We aim:

- To expand our range of “seeing”, providing a frame to explore internal borders and the lens of perception.
- To facilitate fluid movement among different ways of seeing.
- To harness imagination as a creative intervention to achieve "cosmopoesis" a process where inner images begin to reshape and inform one's perception of the external world.

We purposefully blur the boundaries between artistic performance and therapeutic practice, using the air travel experience as a surreal yet precise container, a liminal space, where genuine transformation is possible.

No Really, Who Are We? (An Existential View)

The Multi-Dimensional Human Being

We are a dynamic, ever-changing interplay of consciousness, conditioned phenomena, and imaginative metaphors. We are beings who are constantly constructing and dissolving our sense of self based on our moment-to-moment experience, moving between a feeling of solid individual identity and a recognition of profound groundlessness and participation in an interconnected, imaginal world.

On a foundational level, we could be described as multi-dimensional human beings engaging in the human experience, who are moving through time and space as embodied memories in motion. We are characterized as traveling bodies and traveling beings, made up of atoms and molecules.

Our existence is fundamentally participatory: our perceptions actively shape and are shaped by the realities we inhabit. Furthermore, existence invites us to embrace paradox, recognizing that we are simultaneously singular and multiple, bound and free, limited by our perceptions yet capable of transcending them.

Our work is built upon the philosophical idea that reality is not a simple binary of "real" or "not real". We engage with the Imaginal Realm (mundus imaginalis) as a subtle reality accessed through intuition and creative imagination. This realm is described as "just as real as this one, only glimpsed through a different aperture," serving as a bridge between the inner world (thoughts, emotions, archetypes) and the outer world.

Our Organisational Commitment

Imaginal Airlines operates as a non-profit enterprise under the banner "Temporary Frames Arts Society", dedicated to making the exploration of consciousness and transformation accessible to diverse communities. We are committed to the long-term evolution and expansion of this project.
